HAIL THE QUEEN!

Irene Beasley Elected Queen of Ladio for 1934! Nearly Three Hundred Thousand Votes Cast, in First of Radio's Queen Elections to Be Determined Entirely by Listeners' Votes!

he queen is chosen! Long live the Queen of Radio for 1934—Irene Beasley!
From Maine to California — from Northern Ontario to Mexico—poured in thousands of votes that wrapped the ermine robe of radio royalty around the slim shoulders of the "long, tall gal from Dixie."
Two hundred and ninety thousand votes were cast in all by listeners to elect their queen. And "Bee" Beasley, the recent Armour star, will wear her robe royally. Dorothy Page was appointed "Lady in Waiting."

Plans were completed for the coronation of Queen Irene I. at the National Electrical and Radio Exposition in Madison Square Garden, New York City, Her subjects will hear her over NBC on Wednesday, September 19, from 10:30 to 10:45 p. m. EDT or at 9:30 CDT.

During her stay in New York, Queen Irene and her traveling companion will be the guests of Radio Goide. Elaborate plans have been made for a regal round of merry-making, belitting one of Her Majesty's high station. A royal suite has been reserved in the Hotel Roosevelt.

Her election was a triumph of Main Street over

Roosevelt.

Her election was a triumph of Main Street over Broadway! For though there have been radio queens in the past, these all have been selected by committees of "experts." This queen for the first time in the history of radio queen elections is the true selection of listeners from coast to coast.

She to whom Broadway bowed the knee, is no night-life moth of the Great White Way. She is a Southern girl who got her start by singing—not the tunes of Tin Pan Alley, but a song of her own composition, and hillbilly songs. She sings the songs that grow out of her listeners' hearts; wherefore her queenship has grown out of their hearts, as naturally as a Strange as it seems, bee first learned to sing because I was a big, tall girl." She thought that singing would teach her poise, and overcome her self-consciousness.

It did! Today, when Irene's blue-grey eyes look levelly into yours; when you hear her musical laugh, or watch the rhythmic swing of her walk, you realize that here is a person of unsual charm and poise.

Bee was born in Whitehaven, Tennessee, into a family of music lovers, who soon moved to Texas. She received a good education, and at nineteen—while a school teacher in Memphis—wrote a song which her father paid to have published. Irene placed it on consignment in local music stores.

"That was how I just stumbled into singing over the air," she said. When she tried to interest a local maestro in playing it for radio audiences, he made her sing it. The mike scared the wits out of her—but she got one fan letter!

That one fan letter changed Irene Beasley's life. True, not at first did she plan a radio career. She started to use radio to push the sale of her song, and later, the sale of the hillbilly records she made for Victor. But gradually the lure of radio—started by the thrill of that one fan letter—got the better of her. Like a wandering girl minstrel—a lady troubadour—she roamed from studio to studio, playing, singing, writing scripts, directing. Those were the days when the announcer used to have to say: "Excuse us a moment while we move the microphone to the piano"! They were glamourous days of high adventure for the tall, clear-eyed Bee.

There were bitter disappointments, too! For two years she sang in theaters, studios, clubs in Chicago—trying to get a real start—"and flopped miserably," she tells. Then came a chance in New York, a taste of success as a minor celebrity—and failure again. Everything fell to pieces. "I hit the low point of courage, and went home." Irene explains. Most people would have quit at this point forever.

Again she nerved herself and tried—and this time it was the jinx that quit cold. The rest of the story is curren

Yesterday's Thunder

By Henry Bentinck

The pale blue sparks of radio fly into the past. They weave a pattern—a lacy pattern, while their blueness merges into lavender—lavender and old lace. And we forlavender—lavender and old lace. And we forget the present.

That is what "Roses and Drums" does for us. Every Sunday afternoon it makes history repeat itself through the loudspeakers of the nation—and yesterday's thunder reverberates again in quiet living-rooms of today.

Lavender and old lace of seventy years ago?

Thunder and old lace, rather—during what was up to that time the most dreadful war in human history. And trembling amid the vibrations of that thunder was the destiny—the history—the entire future of the United States.

History? Are present-day radio listeners interested in history? They are, the way "Roses and Drums" tells it!

in history? They are, the way "Roses and Drums" tells it!

For everybody loves a story.

"Roses and Drums" is a story—a modern thousand-and-one tales about men and women; their heartaches, their triumphs and joys as they lived and died. Most of them had no idea that their actions were making history, just as today most of us fail to realize that ours are doing the same thing. They lived and loved and suffered and were so very human—so much like ourselves—that the stories behind "Roses and Drums" would be sufficient to make it popular, even if its sponsors didn't care a fig for historical accuracy. This is especially true since those stories are brought to life by some of the greatest actors and actresses on stage, screen and radio.

But "Roses and Drums" is more than a story. It screen and radio.

But "Roses and Drums" is more than a story. It is also the truth. So faithfully, so meticulously does it adhere to the facts of American history that it actually is making contributions to historical knowledge. For example, the author of the script gets material from memoirs of the generals of that time, and of educated women who kept records of facts and impressions,

History in the Making Too Often Isn't Recognized as History. Yet Under the Aladdin's Touch of Producers, Writer, Actors and Technicians, the Drama of the Civil War-Epic of History for All Ages-Comes to Life. If You Have Missed Your Share of Yesterday's Thunder, Be Consoled, for "Roses and Drums" Is Back on the Air, More Stirring Than Ever

These data are not to be found in textbooks. Yet they are enjoyed alike by professors and small boys—although the latter neither know nor care that these are fresh gleanings of fact, added to the epic of America.

The memoirs and letters of the women of the time are especially valuable. They talk about food and clothes and prices, and the trouble of getting servants—and all the other worries which were just as real 70 years ago as they are today. That is history the way the house wife likes it—and the way she gets it, in "Roses and Drums,"

This program is planned to provide a balanced diet of entertainment and education—fancy and fact—art and science. It is essentially a true story, well told.

How is it told? Imagine yourself in the beautiful theater studio of the National Broadcasting Company, in New York City. It is Sunday afternoon. On the stage some of the world's leading Thespians—a group of the "Who's Who" of the theater—perform in full costume, and with all the polished pantomime that contributed to their fame before program broadcasting was born.

There, before an accustomed studio audience of three or four hundred, the great Guy Bates Post goes on with his characterization of "General Grant." Supporting him are Charles Webster as "Abraham Lincoln," John Riggs as "Randy Claymore," Reed Brown, Jr., as "Gordon Wright," Helen Claire as "Betty Graham," Bill Adams as "Daniel Stark," Porter Hall as "Lew Wallace," Pedro de Cordoba is narrator, and Jack Roseleigh, John Daly Murphy and Arthur Maitland regularly take various roles. These artists pay no attention whatever to those microphones that carry their voices to the millions of listeners on the airlanes.

Wise radio directors have so inteners on the airlanes.

Wise radio directors have so instructed them, knowing that they are working with men and women born to the footlights, men and women who are inspired to their best efforts by the intent faces and the applause of "the house." Capable radio technicians have so placed the microphones that those best efforts will reach the several millions with unimpaired quality.

And what is the result of all this fine acting—this technical excellence?

Down in

Helen Claire, the charming Southern miss who plays "Betty Graham," the pretty heroine of radio's great seventy-year-old epic ceiver, and the Tennessee mountains a withered veter-an of the days of '61 bends an attentive if somewhat failing ear toward an obsolete res slaps a jeaned thigh in glee at the faithful reproduction of a rebel yell; in Shreveport, La., a frock-coated gentleman of the old school nods his head in silent approval of the faithful reenactment of the scene in which he was an actor; in Chicago a high-school freshman decides that history isn't such a terrible bore after all; and in Fort Worth a school-teacher rushes to her writing desk to start the letter that will take violent issue with the writers of "Roses and Drums" over some particular point on which her favorite authority fails to agree—and promptly is shown where the weight of evidence is against both her and her authority!

For the author of the series gathers his information from not one, but many historical authorities. And finally, even after all that, before any script is put on the air, it is air-mailed to Professor W. W. Jernegan, of the University of Chicago history department staff. There more research often is done on any points in doubt.

staff. There more research often is done on any points in doubt.

What chance has the poor would-be critic?

Sometimes this research develops most perplexing situations. Usually the question may be decided by a majority vote of the historians of the period, but frequently the situation of evenly-divided authorities arises. Those from below the Mason-Dixon line place one interpretation on the outcome of a certain battle, and those above that line interpret it in quite a different manner. Then the script staff must accept the version of some one historian who has gained for himself a reputation for fair-mindedness.

for himself a reputation for fair-mindedness.

This demand for accuracy has become almost a phobia on the part of everyone connected even remotely with "Roses and Drums," not only the script writer and the checkers, but even the stenographers and the but even the stenographers and the office help.

Before the story entered the Civil War period, and while the scripts were portraying Revolutionary days, one episode dealt with a true incident in which, when the Continental army was faced with a shortage of bullets, an ingenious New York patriot went about the town gathering window weights to be cast into slugs and fired at the British. The script quite casually mentioned the number of bullets produced from each sash weight.

An office boy, reading the script over the shoulder of a stenographer while she transcribed it, knew something about ballistics, ancient and modern. He knew that the hunk of lead thrown from the Revolutionary musket was many times the weight of the sliver of metal burled from the modern army rifle, and he shouted his protest.

The argument ended only after a bullet had been borrowed from an historical museum and weighted, and that weight divided by the weight of a window balance of Revolutionary days—the poundage of the latter being learned by still further research. Results proved the office boy to be correct, and the script was changed.

proved the office boy to be correct, and the scrips was changed.

In the matter of sound effects, too, accuracy is drawn to a hair-line. The first time the famed Rebel war cty was put on the air, it drew a letter of criticism from a Confederate veteran in Mississippi. The producers located another veteran of the Confederacy several hundred miles out of New York; brought him to the studios and heard the "real McCoy." His yell went down for posterity. It was recorded on a sound disk.

The height of scrupulousness came, however, when the sound man arrived at the studio one evening with an old cap-and-hall revolver for a dueling scene, solemnly contending that the blast of black powder used in that ancient weapon sounded quite different from the smokeless-powder loads of modern weapons. Even in the matter of published pictures the producers of "Roses and Drums" have been called upon to answer criticism. A West Point cadet, after seeing a picture of the cast in uniform, wrote that Grant and Sherman were wearing Navy swords. But again the critic was stopped. The sword of the army staff officer of Civil War days was almost identical with that carried today by Navy officers.

The producers were all ready for that one. They had collected a particularly rare and fine group of actual battleground photographs from the Civil War, one of the finest collections in existence.

Another important asset in this back-stage preparation is a calendar from Civil War days. It was acquired after a listener gravely had informed the producers that March 15, 1863, fell on a Sunday, and not on a Saturday, as the script writer had it. History often is provokingly vague on this point. It may seem a most trivial matter, but the entire atmosphere and setting of a story may be altered by the fact that the events fell on Sunday, rather than on Saturday.

These and countless other little details go into this most modern method of dispensing history, the method that students of all ages find far more absorbing than the duty to remember dates from the common-place printed page.

This history is "humanized" history—fanciful yet accurate. The result is that though teachers recommend this program, pupils do not therefore avoid it—which, to anyone who knows student psychology, is a most profound tribute; pedagogical recommendation has made many a thrilling classical work unpopular.

With all of this care, scores of letters of adverse criticism are received after each episode, but it is criticism that can be, and is, answered. Nine times or one authority alone.

But the popularity of this program cannot be accounted for solely on the groups that it is a good story, accurately told. It is also well told both by the skill of its actors—as has been stated—and the ingenuity, veracity and multiplicity of its sound effects.

In the preponderance of stage celebrities making up the radio cast, the producers have not tried to impress the listeners merely with names. They are sincere in their conviction that stage training is essential to the finished radio actor—that the stage-trained performer "tells the story" better. They will tell you there is a decided difference in the two schools of mimes. The younger, radio-trained actor is invariably better than his stage brother at the first reading of a role. His first interpretation usually is good, while the stage veteran is apt to give a rather halty and an almost stammering first reading.

But afterward, at the second reading, the difference swings the other way. The veteran begins to get the feel of the part, he grasps the deep and the full significance of those lines, the sentiment behind them. In the preponderance of stage celebrities making up

And that is why the cast of "Roses and Drums" has included such names as De Wolf Hopper, Guy Bates Post, Louise Groody, Fritz Leiber, Cecelia Loftus, Violet Heming, Glen Hunter, William Faversham, Effie Shannon, Charles Coburn, Ernest Truex, Pedro de Cordoba, Osgood Perkins, Walter Connolly, Conway Tearle, Oscar Shaw and Donald Meek. Many of these actors faced the microphone for the first time in an episode of "Roses and Drums."

The advantage of this stage-trained cast was evidently best when Elizabeth Love let it be known that she must leave New York for a London theatrical engagement. Here was a situation that would have put the producer of almost any other radio series "on the spot." Miss Love had played the feminine lead, the part of "Betty Graham" since the beginning of the series in April, 1932. Her voice, caressingly Southern, had become known to millions. But the stage insists that nothing is impossible.

Helen Claire, a young stage actress, was brought to the rescue. An unreconstructed Rebel from Union Springs, Alabama, she had the correct dialect. She spent days with Miss Love, copying every little nuance of speech. The test was made with Miss Love and Miss Claire taking alternate speeches in the same production. Not a single person, so far as can be learned, detected the difference. On the following broadcast Miss Claire took over the entire role.

It Then Goes to the Ace Staff of Thespians Who Bring It to You-Finished, Refined, Precise duction. Not a single per-

And now for the sound effects. These are the "eyes" of radio drama —and in this colorful, titanic saga of a nation's travail, they are exceptionally important. Scripts are written with a separate page listing the sound effects. Many pages show forty or fifty different effects relating to the ten minutes of action which are heard over the air. Radio can compensate for the lack of visual stimulus by a greater variety and realism in sound effects than is feasible on the stage, for instance. Over the air, a conversation among the characters, no matter how dramatic, tends to sound flat unless advantage is taken of the effects which can be created.

The author, who is James Glover, by the way, endeavors to place the scenes in settings where accompanying sound naturally would be heard, such as a forest with the singing of birds and rustling of trees—or an old mill with the splash of water—or a point on the seashore in the fog, with the fog-horn heard indistinctly. Novel sound effects continually are being brought out to test the ingenuity of the experts in this line. The boom of a cannon is commonplace over the air, but the sound of an exploding cannon naturally would be different, and a new thrill for the listeners.

The writer, in preparing the romantic portions of the scripts, chooses characters who make contrast with the forceful personalities of the military men. One recent episode included Sidney Lanier, a Southern poet, who was then in prison. His part was quite bookish; he was made very real by reproducing his tubercular cough. Another current script features a colorful old sea captain in charge of a lighthouse. Negro soldiers, guards, or servants with their characteristic speech, often are used in the drama for further contrast.

C. Landry, heard on the air over a Minneapolis station, is the mother of Art Landry, new NBC orchestra leader . . Harold Lloyd was among the audience at Waring's Pennsylvanians first broadcast in New York, after returning from their tour. The Waring aggregation appeared in Lloyd's old flicker, "The Freshman" . Frank Readick will again give you the creeps when the "Shadow" returns to the arrwaves . . Ted Husing has been added to the cast of the "Camel Caravan" only to present a dramatized commercial sketch on the Tuesday night programs . . Olin Dutra, national open golf champion, will be heard in his real character when the "Red Davis" sketches again get under way the first of next month.

ROMANCE IN THE AIR: Betty Barthell, pretty CBS Southern singer, was annoyed last week by a "Colonel John Marshall" of Kentucky, who came to Manhattan and wanted to marry her. Since he never saw Betty, she sent a very homely friend in her place, The guy took the next train back to Kentucky... Announcer Jimmy Wallington rushed to his press agent as soon as he returned from his honeymoon vandeville trip to see how the scribe reacted to his second marriage. At first he was plenty worried, but brightened up when he saw the favorable mentions. The new frau is a dancer at the Radio City Music Hall, and plenty lovely... Another NBC announcer's love affair is not faring so well. John S. Young's romance with Alice Batson is nearing the reefs, it is said, because Poppa Batson objects... Lovely Patti Pickens, whose photograph graced the cover of Radio Guide recently, is experiencing her first serious college-boy romance—poor thing... When Phil Baker returns to the U.S. A. his first six programs will be from the New York studios.

At a recent dinner given to introduce the writers and cast of the "Gibson Family," which was attended by many notables in the radio, literary and show worlds, Laurence Tibbett, in his speech, proved that it pays to study and work hard. "Why, last season," he exclaimed, "I was just selling tires, and this year look at the way I've advanced. I'm now selling the whole automobile!"

Uncanny Vision and Foresight, a Knack of Thinking Ahead, an Almost Psychic Ability to Tear the Curtains Aside and Peer into the Future -These Qualities Have Carried Roxy to the Leadership Among Showmen. Back in 1914, when Broadway was at its gayest, the late Professor Hugo Munsterberg, famed Harvard University psychologist, dropped into the Strand hours, the eminent scholar was astounded at the verve, dash and sparkle of the rounded and balanced program. When the curtain came down he went backstage and asked to see the program director. He was ushered over to Samuel Rothafel.

"Mr. Rothafel," he stated after he had introduced himself "in my estimation you are the world's most natural psychologist."

In addition to paying Roxy this compliment that he praises most highly in life, the Cambridge authority hit upon the exact reason for the dynamic showman's phenomenal success in the theatrical and radio arts.

Roxy was the practical psychologist. He probably wouldn't have understood the scholastic niceties of the subject, but his hardy knowledge, hewn from life, enabled him to become a master of the subject. He was quick to appreciate and to understand the public's desires. His uncanny vision and foresight, his knack of thinking ahead, and his almost psychic ability to tear the curtains of time aside and peer into the future, contributed richly to his upward climb.

Roxy was asked recently what single factor motivated his embrace of radio. His answer was crisp and to the point.

"Belief" he replied. "I believed in the ultimate destiny of radio. It wasn't a haphazard step, not by a long shot. For years I had trained myself to looking ahead and envisioning the future of any new development. I did foresee that some day radio would be hailed as one of the greatest contributions to civilization and the arts. For this reason I allied myself to it. I mentally vivisected its tendencies, its limitations, its strength and its weakness, and after making my analysis I gambled everything on my decision."

Roxy first visualized the Roxy Theater in 1926. In his mind's eye he outlined the beautiful structure that radio, and radio alone, was to make possible. From the very beginning it was Roxy's idea to make the theater a combination of movie house and radio broadcasting studio. This, of course, was another revolutionary idea, and again the critics shook their heads.

That summer he met Herbert Lubin, a multi-millionaire picture producer fresh from Hollywood. So great was Roxy's enthusiasm that he had comparatively little difficulty in winning Lubin's allegiance. Thus, after almost seven years of faithful and tireless service at

Seventh Avenue and Fiftieth Street was the site selected for the theater, and for more than a year workers toiled mightily in the rush to complete the structure. Thus, on March 11, 1927, the doors of the finest motion picture and radio playhouse in the world were thrown open to the public.

The Roxy Theater proved to be the renaissance of the radio industry. Everybody struggled to get on the air. No longer were artistic noses held high when the subject of broadcasting was mentioned. The glamorous personalities of the stage, screen and operatic worlds fought for radio contracts and appearances. Radio, indeed, became the Mecca and goal of the royal families of the make-believe worlds.

The theater itself defied description. Broadcasting facilities were stupendous.

There were sixteen microphone outlets in the studio, fourteen of which could be operated at one time, though as a general rule three microphones sufficed for each broadcast—one for the orchestra, one for the chorus and one for Roxy. Roxy's ingenuity was called into play constantly, for the theater proper was of such enormous size and the variation of programs were so rapid that fresh problems presented themselves at each broadcast. Microphone outlets were placed in the footlights, backstage, in the wings, in the orchestra pit and even on the balcony.

This indeed was a far hail from the crude equipment that had been installed in the Capitol Theater on that epochal day in 1922.

Roxy was tireless in his efforts to create new types of programs and personalities. He was on the lookout of programs and personalities. He was on the lookout constantly for new types and faces, and thus he discovered Jeanie Lang, Jimmy Melton and Sylvia Froos and other notable artists whose present popularity in the radio realm are eloquent testimonials of his ability the radio realm are eloquent testimonials of his ability to recognize radio talent in its infantile stages.

In this direction it is interesting to note the present position of many of his earlier discoveries. Two of his finds have crashed the well-nigh impregnable portals of the Metropolitan Opera Company—Frederick Jaegel and Edith Fleischer. Evelyn Herbert has become a musical comedy star; Eugene Ormandy, one of his assistants, is now a noted symphony director; Billy Akst, another assistant, is head man of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer music department, and Yascha Bunchuk and Erro Rapee are leading orchestra directors. This is an imposing list of talent discovery; a list unmatched thus far in radio annals.

The "gang" reached its pinnacle of influence at the Roxy Theater. So insistent did the personal appearance calls from other cities become that Roxy arranged for a yearly tour across the country. These tours were artistic and financial triumphs. Roxy and the gang were treated like conquering heroes, with gala automobile parades, public receptions, keys to cities and all the trimmings.

R oxy naturally grew with his gang. It was while on tours that he twice forgot to sign off with his usual benediction: "Good night, sweet dreams, God bless you." He was swamped with reproachful letters from his army

He was swamped with reproachful letters from his army of fans.

For three years Roxy was supremely happy in his new venture. Despite all the honor, money and fame that came his way, he remained a slave to his radio programs. He still struggled to keep them as flawless and perfect as possible, injecting his mixture of drama, pathos, comedy and sentiment. Then the Fox Film Corporation bought the controlling interest in the theater, and his final two years there turned into an unhappy nightmare.

The sudden change was a shock to Roxy. For years he had held free sway and reign to do whatsoever he pleased in the interests of his theater and radio programs. Suddenly this power was throttled. They clashed constantly on the matter of his programs. There was a continuous turmoil and friction. Finally, in desperation, he delivered an ultimatum. Either he was to have an absolutely free reign, or else he'd resign.

he was to have an absolutely free reign, or else he'd resign.

Exactly what financial arrangement Roxy made with the Fox Company is unknown, as this episode has remained a closed book with all of the principals involved. At any rate, they reached a satisfactory decision, and in 1931 he ended his official connection with the theater that was to continue to feature his name in tremendous, blazing red letters, even after he became connected with a competing company.

But Roxy was far from through. His brilliant mind already was working on a greater and more tremendous undertaking. Before many months elapsed he was destined to head one of the greatest theatrical and radio developments in the world. Read of it in the next issue of RADIO GUIDE, dated Week Ending October 6.

The Board of Judges was made up of the following radio stars of international reputation: Frank Buck, principal of "Frank Buck's Adventures." NBC-WJZ; Edgar Guest, star of NBC-WJZ's "Household Musical Memories" and outstanding poet: Morton Downey, great radio tenor; Buddy Rosers, whose oschestra is heard poet; Morton Downey, great radio tenor; Buddy Rogers, whose orchestra is heard over NBC and CBS; Tony Wons, star of the new "House by the Side of the Road." First prize of $1,000.00 was awarded by these distinguished judges to Mrs. Bertha Taylor, of Albany, N. Y.

Second prize of $500.00 was awarded to Helen D. Stone, Toledo, Ohio.

Third prize of $250.00 goes to Mrs. C. F. Middlebrook, Macon, Ga.

laying the final judging. For, even though hundreds of thousands of returns were received, the judges naturally were just as thorough and painstaking in making their selections as they would have been had the contestants been few in number.

Many correct answers were received—but many of these had to be disqualified for mistakes in spelling. Other contestants were overzealous, and put too much into their answers; for example, where the solution to one puzzle was the name "Rubinoff," a contestant was disqualified if he wrote "David Rubinoff." Many contestants who had otherwise perfect solutions, made the mistake of failing to follow the pictorial presentation of "Amos and Andy" spelled out the word "and" in full. Many contestants, however, from force of habit, wrote "Amos 'n' Andy." The judges quite properly favored those who followed the strictest cartoon interpretation.

the opportunity to be original, forceful, and to exercise creative thought and sound reason. Those who took the greatest advantage of this opportunity, naturally received the highest ratings, providing their solutions were meticulously correct.

The judges then based their decisions upon the correctness of the solutions; the value of the 20-word letter and such factors as spelling and unswerving obedience to the rules of the contest.

Many elaborate and admirable mechanical and electrical devices were sent in, bearing solutions. But while these were appreciated, no special consideration could be given them. According to the rules, a simple, correct solution—if accompanied by a good 20-word letter—had every bit as great a chance of winning as the most complex and elaborate attempt to catch the eyes of the judges.

Robio Guine extends its congratulations to the winners. It also thanks the many thousands of persons who entered this

The Rat River Murders

River Peel.

To the three silent, startled Indians who were paddling upstream, he looked more like a river-devil than a man. There were snarls in his black beard, flickering yellow lights in his eyes. He clutched a rifle and shouted a hoarse taunt as the current bore him past:

"You copperfaces!"

Peter Alexei, the bow paddle, finally spoke to his companions. Peter wore without incongruity a "mail-order" mackinaw, and a turkey-feather in his hair.

"White man got eyes like wolverine," said Peter gravely. "Wear papoose mocassin around neck, but no got papoose. Him plenty bushed."

Bushed! Such is the northland's term for the strange madness which overtakes men who live too long alone. Such men, when they run amuck, can menace an entire district—so it is no wonder that word spread quickly of the mysterious white man who had come into the territory on a log raft, wearing a pair of baby's quickly of the mysterious white man who had come into the territory on a log raft, wearing a pair of baby's

"For there's never a law of God or man runs north of Fifty-three!"

But that was years ago. Now men in bright red coats, on horseback or behind dog-teams of yipping malemutes, have carried the banner of law and order as far north as the last black frozen point of land which prods the Arctic Ocean; men who have tackled unairaid the toughest police job on record.

The Royal Canadian Mounted Police are on the job. And they are interested in strangers.

They learned a number of disquieting things about this one. He had built a strange, huge log house up the Rat River. When Indians stopped to look at it, he brandished his rifle and ordered them away, while snapping savagely in the air—a shiny set of gold teeth! This from a man who had a perfectly good set of teeth of his own!

When cold weather threatened, this strange fellow had appeared at Fort McPherson trading post, and laid in supplies for the Winter. Constable Millen of the Mounted happened to be at the post. He learned that the man's name was Albert Johnson, that he was supposed to be a trapper, but certainly was a liar—when he talked at all. "I'm from Arctic Red River," Johnson had declared—an obvious lie, for that was Millen's own territory.

Then the Indians began to complain that Johnson was breaking up their traplines and throwing traps and all into the trees. At that, Constables King and McDowell of the R. C. M. P. were despatched from the police headquarters at Arctic Red River to pay a call on this man who didn't want company.

It was a long and weary trek over the snows—forty below zero and a gale blowing. But King and McDowell fought their way up Rat River. When at last they reached Johnson's queer cabin, high on a promontory, banked by scrub pines, they stopped short.

This was no cabin, it was a fort! Built of a heavy double thickness of logs, it seemed beyond the power of one man to construct. Towers were at each corner, and loopholes everywhere. Yet no smoke rose from the chimney, and there were no tracks on the snow which had lain for several days.

McDowell got no answer when he rapped on the door with the butt of his service pistol. "Open up," shouted King, "or we'll have to break in!"

Johnson opened up—but with a rifle. Splinters flew into the tanned faces of the two Mounties as slug after slug ripped through the door. Constable McDowell flung himself face down on the powdery snow. But King fell backwards, shot under the heart.

The shooting ceased. All the northland became quiet once more—as quiet as death. But King was not dead. McDowell picked him up awkwardly, tenderly, and carried him to the dog-sleigh. At every step he expected the madman to open fire again, and kill them both. But that was a chance a Mountie has to take. It was now his job to carry the unconscious King to Aklavik—80 miles away—where lived the nearest doctor.

The northland still tells, with wonder, how the com-

At the end of that time he and his straining dogs stumbled into Aklavik. He murmurad a few words to the hat like surmound. mured a few words to the hastily-summoned Inspector—and keeled over.

Johnson had won the first round of his battle with the Royal Canadian Mounted Police. But radio took up the fight. Inspector Eames talked to the doctor, who Inspector Eames talked to the doctor, who was fighting valiantly for the life of the wounded officer. He talked to McDowell, who had recovered and was ready to start back, alone—to get the mad trapper of Rat River.

"It'll take more than one man to get him," the Inspector insisted. "I've got a plan." He scribbled an order to the man at the controls of the tiny police broadcasting station. A crisp official voice broke in upon the program relayed from faraway Montreal. "Station UZK—UZK—general broadcast—trappers throughout Aklavik district report to nearest police post for service in capture of Albert Johnson, mad trapper of Rat River."

There was a brief pause, then:

Forgotten Then-Now an Epic

The matter of fact way in which we take the broadcast of the international yacht races recalls by contrast the skeptical attitude of the press and public exactly thirty five years ago Marconi, then a young ambitious inventor made arrangements with James Cordon Bennett, publisher of the New York

Heroid to report the races by wireless from a captive balloon. The New York newspaper editors were none too sure of the possible success of the venture. Wireless was still catalogued with black magic, and while they were willing to take a chance, they refused to lay themselves open to the criticism of skeptics Bennett just wanted to try out the possibilities of this new contraption

The ballocn proved impractical so Marconi set up his spark transmitter in the S.S. Ponce of the U.S. Lighthouse Service. The races were contested off the New Jersey coast. A few short miles away, at Navesink Marconi set up his receiving station. I from here the Herald ran its telegraph lines through to New York. The Yachting Editor of the Herald least Marconi and his contest of the Herald. kept Marconi and his operators busy with a steads flow of words at the rate of about fitteen a minute. Today the regular rate of commercial messages is in the neighborhood of two hundred words a minute

The facts that the Yankie sloop Columbia beat Sir Thomas Lipton's Shanrock I and the epic was enacted by wireless, were lost to the public. There were greater things to command attention—a national hero was returning home. Admiral Dewey and his fleet poked noses over the horizon and the yacht race and the birth of radio's spot news broadcasting were forgotten items in the day's news. The papers were given over entirely to the hero of Manual Bay.

However, James Gordon Bennett was sufficiently impressed to establish a wireless station in New York Harbor When wireless became through the years a regular medium of exchanging messages, this little station beat the rest of the papers to the best sea stories of the day

The public dismissed Marconi and his new science entirely, and even forgot to inquire about the race. But at this obscured and forgotten vacht race was born a new era. The public today locks upon what grew out of that era as an indis pensable institution

It is doubtful if more than a handful of people remember this incident yet today only three and a half decades of tire-less experimentation and research have made it possible for entire nations in both the old and the new world to follow simultaneously every phase of this international yacht race. In another ten years we dare to visualize a sight broadcast by

These races, while they never have lost their significance in maritime affairs, are milestones in the development of wireless and of broadcasting.

TOWN__ STATE_ Johnson appeared, standing erect, and clearly outlined against the snowy back-ground behind him. One Mountie swung up his rifle and fired. The figure of the trapper toppled backward.

"Do you think you got him?" Millen gasped. The trooper nodded. "I think so. But it was a snapshot at long range—I couldn't be sure!"

"Well, we'd better lie doggo for a while," decided Sergeant Riddell.

The Fatal Ambush

The Fatal Ambush

About two hours later things were still quiet. No sign of life came from the barricade. Then Constable Millen broke the silence, "Well, let's go."

The policemen charged forward, Suddenly Johnson rose like a jack-in-the-box. Millen dropped, shot through the heart; the other two sprang for cover. But immediately on seeing Millen's prostrate form, Riddell dashed out, swung him shoulder-high and carried him to the shelter of the creek bed. Only then did he learn that he had risked his life to rescue a dead man.

"It would be suicide for us to rush that barricade." he said soberly, "I'll mush back to Aklavik and get more posse-men. You stay here and hold Johnson inside his barricade."

Two days later, Riddell reported in person to Inspector Eames. Again radio sparked across the frosty northern air. "We're going to get him this time, Sergeant," Eames insisted. "I've broadcast a request for all trappers to come in on the hunt, The Eskimos on the Arctic shores are on the lookout for him. I sent a radio message to Punch Dickins, superintendent of Airways at Edmonton. He's flying to McMurray with two officers and a supply of tear gas bombs.

"At McMurray he'll turn over to 'Wop' May, who'll be with us until the search is successful. The plane is radio-equipped, so if we get into a spot where he can't land, we can give him instructions from below. A plane might be used to bomb Johnson's stronghold, where a ground party couldn't get through."

And so a radio-equipped bombing plane, piloted by the well-known Canadian flier, Captain "Wop" May, joined the dog-team-and-posse manhunt!

But Johnson escaped by night from his barricade, and a terrific gale, blowing in Arctic sub-zero weather, kept the fliers from finding him, It was Peter Alexei who brought news of the madman. He had escaped to the Yukon. Shortly after that, Captain May picked up his trail from the air—only to have it merge into the trampled tracks of a herd of caribou, and become utterly lost! It seemed as if Johnson were invincible!

"But," said Captain May, "if he's following the caribou to keep his own trail hidden, you can gain three days on him by cutting across country."

"We'll do it!" the grim-faced Eames decided.

Two days leter them.

We'll do it' the grini-facet Panes decided.

Two days later, they came up with Johnson on the Eagle River. And as usual, he fired first. Sergeant Hersey, the radio man, fell. The rest of the posse opened fire, and Johnson was driven out upon the frozen river where—behind blocks of ice—he continued to fire madly. Over his head the airplane zoomed. From the banks, the police and trappers fired. Then from Captain May came the news that Johnson was through.

They found his body crouched behind a barricade of ice cakes, with lips curled back from the yellow teeth, and an expression of utter hatred forever stamped upon his face.

pression of utter hatred forever stamped upon his face.

He had been struck by one bullet—yet, by some prank of his evil genius, the police slug had hit him in the hip pocket, where he carried a box of rifle ammunition. This had been set off by the impact, tearing a great wound in his hip and sending five of his own dum-dum bullets in five different directions through his body. One of them had severed his spine —and yet he had gone on trading shot for shot with the officers until he straightened out in the rigidity of death. Hands, ears and feet were frozen, and his body was emaciated to the point of ghastliness.

Even in death, the madman of the North kept his secret. He carried nothing which could possibly he used to identify him. But he did carry a set of false teeth, heavily gold-filled and presumably made for a woman—and a pair of baby shoes of black leather, hung around his corded neck on a buckskin thong!

HARRY HORLICK

As He Appears Under the

MIKEroscope

By Harry Steele

A bout eleven years ago a young Russian of worried mien presented himself to the program board of WEAF, then owned by the American Telephone and Telegraph Company in New York.

"My name is Horlick," he announced in his funereal fashion, "No malted milk today," countered a facetious executive, "I am an orchestra leader," Horlick persisted, "I' want to conduct a band on your chain."

"Nets to you," said the program chiefs, and Harry has been on a network ever since. In addition to corralling a multitude of listeners, he has set up a record for sustained appearances.

He is not a Gypsy—at least not by tribal affiliation. But in his search for the unique in the music of two continents, he has led a Nomad life, thus doubling his experience in Nomad's land. His first official essay at wandering came when he went Romanoff to eschew the Volga and seek the refined.

By training Horlick is a violinist, and so proficient a one that he literally fiddled his way out of Siberia to a place, by command, in the Moscow Symphony orchestra. That was when, as a member of the White Army, he was imprisoned by the revolutionists and slated for the salt mines. A skeptical judge, unimpressed by Harry's claims that he was a musician, ordered him to play in court. Natural talent plus the solemnity of the occasion gave his sole such verve that he was ordered to Moscow.

To the casual listener Horlick is just the conductor of the grocery firm's Gypsies. But to those in the know, he is one of the ablest musicians in the country. He has a bewitching touch with music and possesses the added gift of being able to impart his vast knowledge to his men. It's nothing to see the entire orchestra playing number after number without so much as a lead-sheet in front of them.

The first person ever to be impressed by Harry's playing was his older borther. He broke down and wept when he heard the six-vear-old youngster play a number on the violin he had made for himself. He had to construct his own instrument because his father couldn't conceive of music

Few of the millions who sing, whistle or dance to the strains of contemporary compositions are familiar with the names of the authors of these works.
